

2018 Undergraduate Research Award Winner: Sagi Shaier

The Undergraduate Research Award winner for 2018 is Sagi Shaier. His research topic: "A Mathematical Model for the Effect of Domestic Animals on the Basic Reproduction Number of Human African Trypanosomiasis (Sleeping Sickness)."

Each year the Undergraduate Research Award honors an outstanding researcher. Applicants submit a research article and application essay, which highlights the library's role in supporting undergraduate research endeavors. Award winners receive $500, recognition during the April Symposium of Student Scholars, and publication in the "Kennesaw Journal of Undergraduate Research."

"I exist as I am, that is enough."
